This fine bred stallion is of a rich brown color, perfectly sound, without a blemish, stands sixteen hands high, six years old, with a record of 2.41 on a new half mile track, but can trot very much faster.

He was bred in New Jersey, by W. O. Horton, and has full sisters trotting in the twenties, viz. Lady Hallbeck, Lady Fleetfoot, and others very promising. He was sired by Black Dutchman, by Dobbin's Old Black Hackney, he by young Hackney, and he by Imported Grand Hackney. (Arabian.) His dam was the renowned mare Phebe, whose stock sold for $11,000 and was favorably mentioned through Wilkes Spirit at the time of her death. Through his grandsire he gets two strains of Messenger, she being by Dutchman, by old Abdallah, and through young Hackney he gets one strain.

THE YOUTH OF PRINCE BISMARCK.

It is a common error with the biographers of famous men to trace back their established supremacy to a period when it had not yet been to resist, and to torture every trivial word or action of the hero's childhood into prophecy of his future greatness. He is wild and reckless, it is the impetuosity of genius; he is lazy and slovenly, it is the scorn of a great spirit for outward appearance. Every window that he breaks typifies his future conquests, every tree that he climbs has ever-mounting ambition. This is more absurd, inasmuch as he could himself had no thought of his future greatness, or, indeed, what career he should adopt. The keenest observer would have seen in Otto Von Bismarck during his pinafore days nothing more than a bright, spirited, fearless boy, always ready for any fun or mischief. Yet the surroundings of his childhood might well seem to argue some, at least, of the achievements of his after-life. In the great gate of his ancestral home at Schonhausen were still to be seen the marks of French bayonets; and the grave boards of the estate could point out to the young master the patch by which the "grande Frau," his mother, had fled into the depths of the forest at midnight to escape the approaching enemy. Like other old houses, the chateau contained a haunted room, in which the boy loved to sit, and even to sleep at times, out of sheer bravado; and in after years when the terror of his name had gone abroad from one end of Europe to the other the superstitious peasantry whispered among themselves that a spectre had appeared to him there in the dead of night and foretold what he should one day be. It is related—though the anecdote has a somewhat ex post facto sound—that on one occasion the future Chancellor was playing about the park with a new cross-bow which had just been given to him, and trying his skill upon every mark that presented itself, till at length he sent a shot into the back of a French statue of Hercules that stood beside one of the walks. "Wrong, my boy, wrong!" said an old friend of the family, who had witnessed the exploit; "you should always strike an enemy, even a French one, front the front." "So I will, some day," answered the child, firmly.

Bismarck's university career at Gottingen, like that of another statesman of equal fame, was "only consistent in its inconsistency, and only regular in its irregularity." He is said to have fought upward of twenty duels, and to have scandalized the authorities, when summoned before them for some breach of discipline, by appearing in a slouched hat and horse man's cape, with a short pipe in his mouth. His constant absence from the class-room aroused the wrath of his Professor, who, the future diplomat said, fully satisfied by suggesting "that among the countless hearers whom the Herr Doctor's fame was sure to attract, one obscure student would never be missed." It is interesting to know that his fellow-lodger at Berlin was a young American, by name John Lothrope Motley, and the little thing is known of the intimacy between the future conqueror and the future historian forms a very pleasant little prologue to the famous career that awaited both.

It was while Bismarck was still a young clerk in the Berlin "Department of Justice" that the present sovereign, then Prince William of Prussia, first saw the man who was one day to make him Emperor of Germany. It happened that a fellow clerk, also above six feet in height, was presented along with him, and the Prince, looking with an appreciative smile at the two young giants, remarked pleasantly, "I see gentlemen, that Justice chooses her servants by the standards of the Guard." The boldness of the young Court's demeanor, and his haughty intolerance of anything approaching to a slight, speedily made him conspicuous to the service.

One may still hear some elderly Prussian official relate admiringly how, when a superior to whom Bismarck was reporting, went to the window and drummed on the glass with his fingers (the latter retorted by tapping to the other window and striking up a still louder tune upon it); or how, when curtly asked by the same magnate, after being keep waiting for an hour, what he wanted, Bismarck replied: "I came to ask for leave, but now I request my dismissal." On another occasion, the cool effrontery of a witness whose statement Bismarck was taking down, provoked him to start up and exclaim, "If you can't behave properly, I'll kick you out of the room." "Turning a man out of the room is my affair," interposed the chief of the department. "You hear?" said Bismarck to the witness; "if you don't behave properly, I'll make my 'chief' kick you out."

This characteristic disregard of consequences was even more strikingly exhibited a few years later, when one of the battues of a well-known beer saloon began to speak disrespectfully of the reigning family. Bismarck, who was present at once broke in with, "Lea e the room, fellow! If you're not gone before th s glass is empty, I'll break it over your head." A Babel of outcries instantly burst forth, but the unmoved Count quietly drained his glass, and then brought it down so vigorously on the offender's pate as amply to make good his words. As the man rolled bleeding under the table, Bismarck leaned back in his chair and coolly inquired, "How much for the broken glass, waiter?"

One of the great statesman's most characteristic utterances was that of April, 1866, when, learning that Austria seemed likely to concede, at the last moment, the points at issue between her and Prussia, he exclaimed, with undisguised vexation, "What? now that we have brought the old horse up to the fence! won't he take the leap after all?" The ruthless cynicism of modern diplomacy had seldom been more pointedly exemplified; and those who have seen the man of "blood and iron" in the retirement of his own household, might well be surprised at the kindly, and even tender, bearing of one who could speak so lightly of a cruel and destructive war, and whom popular belief represents as equally without fear, without faith, and without mercy. A much more creditable anecdote is that which records how the Prince, when asked which he prized the most among the countless orders that glittered on his broad breast, laid his finger on a plain bronze medal and answered emphatically, "This." The medal was one which had rewarded years before, his rescue of a drowning man at the risk of his own life; and the inquirer afterward learned that Bismarck, though twice dragged down so deep that only the bubbles on the surface told of the struggle below, never once relaxed his hold, and at length succeeded, without help of any kind, in bringing his charge safely to the shore.—*N. The Press says there is now more than ever a sharp rivalry between the tug boats in Portland harbor. There has always been a good sharp competition between these boats, but it never has reached as high a pointas at present. There are now four first class boats, and they each claim to have the most of the business. The captains of each of these steamers has a supreme contempt for the others, and they never miss an opportunity to beat each other. To do this they work night and day regardless of sleep or rest. It is not an uncommon thing for one of these boats to start out at midnight and go out eight or ten miles and wait until daybreak for a vessel. Sometimes there will be two or three of them play out side all night and not one of them will get a vessel to pay them for their trouble. They all go out at three or four o'clock in the morning if not before. In clear weather they sometimes run out twenty miles.

INFIRMITY.—Integrity is a virtue which costs much. In the period of passion, it takes self denial to keep down the appetites of the flesh; in the time of ambition, with us far more dangerous, it requires very much earnestness of character to keep covetousness within its proper bounds, not to be swerved by love of praise of men, or official power over them. But what magnificent recompense does it bring to any and every man. Any pleasure which costs conscience a single pang is really a pain and not a pleasure. All gain which robs you of your integrity is a gain which profits not; it is a loss. Honor is infamy if won by the loss of your soul. But what womanly and manly delight does this costly virtue bring into our consciousness here and elsewhere.

The goodness which struggles and battles which goes down deep and soars high, is the stuff of which heroism is made, by which the world is salt and kept pure.—It is the seed which bears fruit in martyrs and makes men nobler than their nature—and demi-gods and the prophet of a better time.

INFORMATION FOR A ROUNDABOUT "TRUTH SEEKER."

We are not in the habit of replying to communications addressed to us through the columns of the Bangor Commercial, and a writer in yesterday's issue of that paper, who dates his letter from Lincoln and signs himself "Truth Seeker," would have given more evidence of the candid use of that designation had he applied to us directly for the information that he requests. The writer also devotes so much of his letter to a manifestation of his entirely unimportant dislike for us, and his own sympathy with the Greenback sophistries, that we should be amply justified in ignoring his effusion. Still, as the only point and inquiry of his letter covers a subject which the Greenbackers constantly misrepresent, and raises the issue of fact as to a statement on which the whole Greenback argument is based, we take pleasure in giving that person and all other Truth Seekers the information that he asks. We quote the following material passages from his letter:

THE WHIG, in its statement that hope has been not only no contraction of the currency in the past thirteen years, but an actual increase, takes bold ground which, if it can maintain it, will certainly go far towards weakening the Greenback cause. Relying upon what it claims to be an official statement from the Hon. Hugh Mc Cullough, Secretary of the Treasury, it places the entire amount of paper money in circulation October 31st, 1865, at less than $745,000,000. Will THE WHIG please give us the items that go to make up this amount?

If THE WHIG is right in the above statement and there is really more money in circulation to-day than in 1865, the contraction certainly cannot be the cause of all the misery through which the country has wallowed in the past five years. I have seen it stated that there were upwards of $1,800,000,000 in circulation as money in 1865—a vast difference from $745,000,000. Which is correct? It is certainly susceptible of proof and the people want the truth. While THE WHIG please give us the items and figures upon which Mr. McCullough based his statement? "TRUTH SEEKER."

Lincoln, May 15, 1878.

Two facts are made obvious in the above paragraph: First that the writer has never intelligently read THE WHIG's article, as we did not assert that there had been "no contraction of the currency in the past thirteen years." We referred specifically to the period between 1865 and 1873, in answer to the Greenbackers' argument that the great panic of that year which inaugurated the present era of depression, was caused by an enormous contraction of the currency. This we showed to be an entirely baseless assertion. As to contraction since the speculative crash of 1873 we will have something to say before we close. Secondly, the above paragraphs show that "Truth Seeker" has not studied the truth in the official reports of the Secretary of the Treasury in 1865, or he would not exhibit such infantilarity with the name of Hon. Hugh McCulloch—not McCullough. We have read that officials report quite frequently and have it now open before us; and from its authoritative statements and those of the Comptroller of the Currency, we will give to "Truth Seeker" the "items and figures" of the volume of currency in circulation on the 31st of October 1865.

On page 134 of the volume of the "Message and Documents" for 1865-6, the official report of Secretary McCulloch dated Dec. 4, 1865, says:

"The paper circulation of the United States on the 31st of October last was substantially as follows:

1. United States notes and fractional currency,	$44,219,038 20
2. Notes of the national banks,	152,000,000 00
3. Notes of state banks including outstanding issues of state banks converted into national banks,	69,000,000 00
	$264,218,038 20

The Secretary goes on to say,

"In addition to the United States notes, there were also outstanding $31,526,800 five per cent. treasury notes, and $146,681,146 compound interest notes, of which it would doubtless be safe to assume that $30,000,000 were in circulation as currency.

"From this statement it appears that, without including seven and three-tenths notes, many of the small denominations of which were in circulation as money, and all of which would tend in some measure to swell the aggregate, the paper money of the country amounted on the 31st of October, to the sum of $464,218,038 20."

The above figures include everything used as money except the seven and three-tenths notes in circulation. Turning to pages 234-5 of the same volume, we find the following statement in the official report of Hon Freeman Clarke, Comptroller of the Currency:

"As the first step to be taken toward a reduction of the government issues based on currency, second dollar would recommend the conversion of all the interest-bearing legal tender notes into 5-20 six per cent. bonds. It is believed that the slight contraction caused by such conversion would be scarcely perceptible, more especially at the time, as it is not improbable that more than five per cent. of the issue is now in active circulation."

The "whole issue" of these 7 3-10ths interest-bearing legal tender notes was limited by the act of June 30, 1864, which created them, to $200,000,000, and the subsequent issue of March 3, 1865 was not made legal tender. Five per cent. of that issue would therefore be $10,000,000, which the Comptroller says was in circulation Oct. 31, 1865. Adding this to the $264,218,038.20 which the Secretary gives as covering all other descriptions of currency, and we have as the total circulation of all kinds of paper money $274,218,038.20, which is as we stated it, less than $745,000,000.

These figures are authoritatively given by the responsible officers of the Treasury in charge of the national finances at the time, and they show that the reckless statements to which we have referred and which "Truth Seeker" says he has seen in print—"that there were upwards of $1,800,000,000, in circulation in 1865," more than doubles the actual fact and is more than one thousand millions of dollars from the Truth.

With the exposure of this monstrous misrepresentation the whole argument that the crash of 1873 was the result of enormous contraction of the currency, falls to the ground. The official report of Hon. John Jay Knox, Comptroller of the Currency, for the year 1877, on page 29 gives the following statement of currency circulation Jan. 1, 1873:

Legal tender notes,	$356,979,967
Old demand notes,	54,000
Fractional currency,	45,752,061
Notes of national banks, including gold notes,	344,582,819
Aggregate,	$748,361,157

Showing for January 1873, as we stated, "several millions more than the whole volume of every kind of paper money in circulation in October 1865." Not only was this the fact, but in 1874 the currency was increased to about $778,000,000 and in 1875 to over $782,000,000 without accomplishing any relief of the business depression which the Greenbackers are now claiming ability to cure by an inflation of paper money. That there has been some contraction since then is true, as the collapse of fictitious values in the crash of 1873 and subsequent experience had shown the uselessness and mischief of such an excess of irredeemable currency. But the paper dollar of Dec. 1, 1877 was worth 97.31 cents in gold, while the paper dollar of Aug. 31, 1865, was worth but 69.32 cents, so that the paper currency in circulation Dec. 1, 1877 had a purchasing power in the markets of the world of about $671,000,000, against $516,434,000 which represented the gold value of the $745,000,000 of paper circulation in 1865.

Finally, if "Truth Seeker" wants to know whether we are now suffering from a lack of circulating medium, we refer him to the financial reports and quotations of all our money markets, and since he has made his inquiries through the columns of the Bangor Commercial, he may be disposed to give especial weight to the following comprehensive, specific and emphatic editorial statement of that paper in the early days of January of the present Year of Our Lord 1878:

[From the Bangor Commercial.]

"THERE IS NO STRINGENCY IN THE MONEY MARKET AT ALL. PROBABLY THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A TIME IN THE WHOLE HISTORY OF THE COUNTRY WHEN THERE WAS SO MUCH IDLE MONEY AS NOW; AND NEVER A TIME WHEN IT COULD BE OBTAINED IN SUCH ABUNDANCE AND ON SUCH FAVORABLE TERMS ON GOOD SECURITIES, AS AT THIS VERY HOUR."

PARTISAN INVESTIGATION.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

All the malice, all the cowardice, and all the shameless partisanship which the worst enemy of the Democratic party could wish to see it exhibit, it has displayed in the matter of the Florida investigation. As we predicted, it does not dare to have a full investigation, and does not dare to have an impartial investigation. With indecent disregard for common justice and the public interest, it refuses to inquire as to frauds by Democrats. Being without proof of accusations persistently made, the Democratic party proposes to create a committee of scavengers, in the name of the Congress of the United States, to hunt up scandals that may damage its opponents, but to refuse a hearing to proofs that may damage itself. Finally, no standing committee of a Democratic House being sufficiently unscrupulous and indecent, the party proposes to create a special committee for the doing of this dirty work. The Republicans of the House have done justice to themselves and their constituents. Not shirking or opposing investigation, they have only demanded that it shall be full and fair. In that demand they ought to persist as far as parliamentary rules give them power, and if public business be delayed, those are responsible who want a partisan committee, instead of an impartial and complete inquiry for the sake of justice.

Mr. Tilden's right to the Democratic party nomination is in dispute. He has bought it body and soul—it has a soul. He owns it, mass and leaders—if it has leaders. If he sees fit to drive it headlong to defeat and destruction, no Democrat has a right and no Republican will have a disposition to find fault. But he has not bought and does not own the country. He has no right to disturb business, to disorder industry, and to dishonor and blacken free institutions in the United States, for the gratification of a personal vindictiveness, or a private ambition. Let him foreclose his mortgage on his party and secure a renomination, if he likes, but in ways that do not injure and disgrace his country. Since the buying of one Republican elector to recognize Cronin, which has arranged by telegrams from Chinchey Park, the country has but limited faith in the testimony of men whose knowledge of Mr. Tilden's peculiar methods has resulted in "quickened conscience."

In the debate the Democrats were forced into the virtual admission that their smelling committee was intended to find means, if possible, for assaining the President's title. They allege as the pretext for their action the memorial from Maryland. But Maryland sent its memorial long ago, and was treated with just contempt. The pretext involves a palpable falsehood. Investigation is now proposed, not because of a demand by Maryland which was rejected when made, but because it is now hoped that somebody, with "conscience quickened" by a barrel of money or otherwise, has given, or may give, evidence damaging to the Republican party. It is very likely that such evidence may be given, before a partisan committee carefully picked to shield witnesses from dangerous cross examination. It would be strange if, among all the corrupt and desperate politicians of Florida and Louisiana, some could not be found to swear to almost anything strongly desired. How such witnesses will fare before an investigating committee of a different kind, it is for them to say.

We present as that the fraudulent inquiry desired by Democrats, if ordered, will not be the only one instituted. The Senate has as much right and reason to investigate as the House, and can afford to take all the evidence on both sides. I. can contrast an affidavit by McLin with his previous sworn statements, and with the proofs gathered by actual canvass in the contested election case in Florida. It can call for all that Dennis has to tell. It can find out what attempts to bribe electors and other officials were made by Democrats and by whom, and how they succeeded. It can place on the names stand Mr. Tilden, Colonel Pelton and Mr. Pat ck to tell what they know about Oregon and the cipher dispatches. It can show the whole conduct of the campaign in Louisiana, South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi, and other Southern States. It is safe to say that, if the evidence is once presented in full, the country will understand perfectly well why the Democrats did not dare to have a full or impartial investigation.

TWO LONG STEPS FORWARD

[From the Worcester Gazette.]

At the Cincinnati musical festival ladies are asked to leave their hats in the dressing rooms and entores are positively prohibited. Here are two long steps forward in the progress of civilization, which a New England, prided itself on its "culchaw," has not yet taken. The male spectator can perhaps resign himself to a calm contemplation of a millliner's masterpiece, when he finds he can not see either, around or over the lady in front of him, but it is time the annoyance of repeating every number on a programme was abolished. It has ceased to be a compliment to the artist, it is an extortion by the ticket-payer. It is an annoyance to those who wish to get home in reasonable season, and the second performance of the same piece is rarely satisfactory.

Angus Cameron believes with the fervent faith of the West in the mission and future of the Republican party. He sees in it the best and most available machinery for defending the country, and raising the grade of politics and the character of politicians. He believes that what it has done it will keep on doing. In these days of want of political faith, of reaction from the heroic era of war, his clear thinking and ringing words will do vast good.—Philadelphia Press.

RUSSIAN OPINION OF OUR MAINE LAW.

An editor at communication in the Elsworth American describing a recent visit to the Cimbria, gives the following remarks of the Russian commander, Count Gripenberg, with reference to the Maine Law:

"We are very much pleased indeed with the workings of your Maine Law. We never saw nor heard of anything so wonderful. Why, we send our men on shore with the utmost freedom, and they are orderly and well behaved; they make friends with the natives and come back to us at night all right. We are glad to have them go on shore; for the exercise and recreation which they obtain there are very much to their advantage. Now, if liquor were sold, we should be obliged to keep them on board all the time, otherwise they would become intoxicated, get into trouble among themselves and with the inhabitants, destroy property, insult your people, and make them all their enemies. O, I assure you we are very much pleased with your Maine Law!"

MINNEAPOLIS. Several newspapers out West have been quite officious in getting up sympathy for the city of Minneapolis. The Tribune of that city ridicules the idea put forth by the New York Tribune that it is "an unfortunate city which has well nigh been destroyed," and adds:

"We wish to give the outside public to understand, what is the exact fact, the Minneapolis is in need of no extraordinary sympathy on account of the pecuniary results of the recent fires that her own citizens are both able and willing to care for the wives and orphans of the killed, and are prosecuting energetically and generously with that work; and as for the burnt mills, there are already many scores of men at work rebuilding them, and by the time the next crop is harvested, Minneapolis will be turning out more flour per day than at any previous day in her history."

Mr. Morrison says that if he had refused to approve the bill for the $100, for assorted liquors contracted by the committee of the last Congress of which he was chairman, the members who drank them or the Sergeant-at-Arms would have had to pay for them. Of course but would have been a calamity too horrible to contemplate. Democratic committeemen pay for the wines and cigars they drink and smoke as long as there is a single dollar left in the contingent fund of the House? Never, never!

The Upright Piano

is from its small compact form and handsome exterior, especially suited to the parlors of many houses where a Square Piano could not conveniently be placed. The volume of tone is fully equal to any Square Grand Piano, while the quality is of the best and most desirable musical character. The durability of Upright Pianos, and their capacity of standing in tune, is unparalleled in the history of Piano making. I have both UPRIGHT and SQUARE PIANOS of all grades and prices, including the unsurpassable

DOMESTIC NEWS.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS,

Potter's "Fraud" Resolution."

BOUND FOR A ONE-SIDED INVESTIGATION.

NO AMENDMENT ALLOWED.

THE REPUBLICANS AGAIN REFUSE TO VOTE.

"No Quorum Voting"—Adjourned.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS—Second Session.

WASHINGTON, May 16.

Senate.

Mr. Maxey, from the Committee on Postoffices, reported without amendment the Senate bill to provide for the establishment of steamship mail service between the United States and Brazil, it being the bill introduced by Mr. Eustis yesterday.

Mr. Butler submitted a concurrent resolution providing for a commission of two senators, three members of the House and three officers of the regular army who have served not less than ten years, to whom shall be referred the whole subject of reform and reorganization of the Army.

At the conclusion of the morning business the Senate resumed the bill to repeal the special resumption act and Mr. Matthews read an argument upon the general financial policy of the Government and gave notice that he would hereafter submit a proposition as an amendment to the pending bill.

Mr. Anthony called up the House joint resolution to print 300,000 copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1877.

The Committee on Printing reported an amendment to reduce the number to 200,000, and also to print 4,500 copies of the Reports of the Colonial Charters and Constitution of the United States. A lengthy discussion ensued. The amendment of the Committee reducing the number of copies of the report to 200,000 was rejected. The other amendment proposed by the Committee in regard to printing the Colonial Charters was agreed to with a further amendment, by Mr. Hoar increasing the number of copies to 5,000. The joint resolution was then passed.

The Senate at 3.35 adjourned until to-morrow.

House.

The Regular Order Demanded.

Immediately after reading the Journal Mr. Potter demanded the regular order which was on seconding the demand for the previous question on the resolution for a special committee on all the electoral frauds, on a standing vote there were but 89 yeas, and no negatives whereupon the usual objection, "no quorum voting," was made by Mr. Hale and Tellers ordered, Potter and Hale acting in that capacity. The report of the Tellers was 98 yeas, Mr. Hale and Mr. Steele in the negative. Mr. Potter then moved a call of the House.

Motion to Postpone Potter's Resolution.

Mr. Page—Is it in order to move to postpone this matter indefinitely so that the House may proceed to the transaction of public business?

The Speaker (severely)—If the gentleman will vote and help to make up a quorum then that motion can be made.

Mr. Page (angrily)—That was not the question I asked. (Calls for the regular order from the Democratic side.)

Mr. Conger—I rise to a parliamentary inquiry—(continued demands for the regular order)—and a parliamentary inquiry is always in order.

The Speaker—The gentleman will state it.

Mr. Conger—I ask whether it is in order at this time to raise the question of consideration?

The Speaker—It is not.

Mr. Sayler—The gentleman certainly knows that when no quorum is voting there are but two motions in order and one of them has just been made.

Mr. Conger—I appeal to a parliamentary inquiry—(continued demands for the regular order)—and a parliamentary inquiry is always in order.

The Speaker—The gentleman will state it.

Mr. Conger—I ask whether it is in order at this time to raise the question of consideration?

The Speaker—It is not.

Mr. Sayler—The gentleman certainly knows that when no quorum is voting there are but two motions in order and one of them has just been made.

Mr. Conger—I address myself to the chair and not to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. Sayler—I addressed myself to the chair and also to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan. (Calls of order.)

Roll Call—247 Members Present.

A call of the roll was proceeded with and 247 members answered there being but 45 absentees, even Stephens of Georgia who got leave of absence for a week Monday, was present in his wheeled chair.

Further proceedings under the call being dispensed with, Mr. Fort suggested to to Mr. Potter that the regular order be laid aside and the House proceed to consideration of the Pension bills.

Mr. Potter—We are prepared to go on with public business and are here for that purpose, but are left without a quorum by the willful absence of gentlemen on the other side and I demand the regular order.

The question recurred on seconding the demand for the previous question, and on this vote the Democrats developed the greatest strength they have yet shown, the report of the Tellers being 133 affirmative, and 9 negative. The usual cry "No quorum, Mr. Speaker" coming from the Republican side of the House, another call of the House was ordered.

Another Call.

This call disclosed the fact that 273 members were present, and that there were 29 absentees. The question again recurred on seconding the demand for the previous question, the vote standing 136 affirmat ve, one negative. During the voting Conger stationed himself close to the Tellers with a slip of paper for the purpose, as he stated, of making a note of such Democrats as voted notwithstanding the fact that they were paired.

Banks makes a Proposition.

On announcement of the vote Banks said: I propose to the gentleman from New York that we suspend action on this resolution until Saturday, in order to go on with the appropriation bills. A quorum, as I am informed, will then be present and the resolution can be disposed of.

Potter—Let me ask the gentleman whether, if we do as he proposes, his side will be prepared to vote on this question when it comes up Saturday?

Mr. Banks—I am unable to answer. I make a proposition on my own responsibility because the country requires that the public business should be attended to.

Mr. Potter—Will you help us to make a quorum?

Mr. Butler—I am informed that the gentlemen's friends will be able to dispose of this question in their own way and to their satisfaction by Saturday so I propose that the House suspend action till then.

Mr. Potter—If I am assured that gentlemen on the other side will vote on this question Saturday I will be willing to go on with other business.

Stephens Wants to Speak

Mr. Stephens indicated a desire to speak, but met with cries of "regular order" from the Democratic side.

Mr. Waite of Conn.—Will not the gentleman on the other side let Stephens speak?

Mr. Stephens—I ask consent to be heard for three minutes. Cries of "regular order" from the Democratic side, and "no" objection on this side" by the Republicans.

Mr. Potter—It would afford me great pleasure to yield to the gentleman from Georgia if I were permitted to yield to anybody. I move the House adjourn. Agreed to 141 to 116.

What he Desired to Say.

The Speaker submitted the requests of three members for leave of absence, but Mr. Hooker objected, unless complied with the condition that their absence was not to operate against obtaining a quorum.

The Speaker stated that that amounted to an objection.

The suggestion which Mr. Stephens desired to make was that the demand for the previous question should be voted down and that all amendments proposing to carry out the proposition in its fullest extent should be admitted.

It will be observed that on the last vote the Democrats numbered 141, and as Mr. Morse of Massachusetts voted on the other side, they have 142 members present, within five of a quorum.

The Democrats will Persevere in Delaying Public Business.

The select Democratic caucus adjourned without immediately after adjournment to take into consideration the present condition of the Potter resolution. Several Democratic members were invited to be present. The committee decided that the Democrats should adhere to their determination to admit no amendments to the resolution and to persevere in their present course until the resolution shall be adopted and further that no public business shall be transacted meanwhile.

Secretary Sherman's Opinion.

The National Republican to-day publishes a long interview with Secretary Sherman relative to the pending Potter investigation. In reply to a question as to what he thought was the real purpose of the resolution, the Secretary said, it looked very much as if the Democrats were engaged in the work of preparing ammunition for the fall campaign. He said that he did not think the resolution aimed at ousting Hayes whose seat was secure, and as far as he was personally concerned he defied the Democrats to do their worst, as his visit to the South was solely in the interest of an honest election.

FENIANISM.
Strength in Lawrence Mass.

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 16. A rumor is prevalent that an English Emissary is here to ascertain the strength of the Irish nationalists here. The report has gained such credence that a watch is placed upon a suspicious looking individual who has been in the city the past two weeks unemployed, spending the most of his time going among the Irish saloon keepers, spending considerable money. There is unusual activity here in Fenian circles and the leaders make no secret that in the event of war between Russia and England, Lawrence will furnish a large quota of Fenians as they did for the Canadian raids.

Assembling on the Vermont Frontier.—Fears of an Invasion.

NORTH TROY, Vt., May 16. The activity along the Canadian frontier in this vicinity goes to prove the correctness of the rumored Fenian invasion. A body of strangers are encamped in the woods near this place. They are all Irishmen, well dressed and intelligent, and accessions are being made to the camp almost hourly. The Canadian militia have been called out and there seems to exist a feeling along the border that an immediate invasion of Canada by a large army of Fenians is more than probable.

Our Canadian Cousins Alarmed.

MONTREAL, May 16. At several points in Eastern townships near the frontier, considerable deposits of arms are suspected. The attention of the military authorities has been directed to the subject.

NEW YORK CITY.
A Tammanyite Denounces Tilden.

NEW YORK, May 16. At a meeting of the Tammany Hall general committee tonight, State Senator Ecclesine made a vigorous speech in denunciation of Samuel J. Tilden, who, he said, having been elected President, had not the pluck to take the place given by the people. The Republicans have foreshadowed their coming man, touring in Europe. He is bold, vigorous and determined and sticks to his friends. The Democrats must name a man of like qualities.

WASHINGTON
Funeral of Prof. Henry.

WASHINGTON, May 16. The body of the late Prof. Joseph Henry was placed in a walnut casket covered with black cloth and lined with merino. Clark Mills, sculptor, took a cast of the face. There were many floral tributes to the memory of the deceased. After brief religious services in the Smithsonian building (where the deceased resided the body was removed to the hearse by twelve soldiers; the pallbearers being Associate Justice Strong, W. W. Corcoran, Admiral Rodgers, Gen. Humphries, Geo. W. Childs, and Joseph Patterson of Philadelphia. The remains were interred in the Oak Hill Cemetery.

MARYLAND.

The Tribune says that the Democrats at Washington do not feel certain of a solid vote on Potter's resolution, unless Young's amendment, pledging that the Presidential title shall not be disturbed, is attached to it.

A Bradford (Pa.) despatch says there was another heavy frost Wednesday night, and all the fruit in the valley destroyed.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE EASTERN CRISIS.
Russia's Telegraph Fleet.

LONDON, May 16. A St. Petersburg despatch says that the Russian papers are full of news about the volunteer fleet. Subscriptions for fitting it out are coming in from all parts of the country. The sums raised seem very small, but they are double the amounts contributed from the same sources for the relief of the sick and wounded.

Schouvaloff's Mission.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 16. Complete secrecy is maintained in regard to Schouvaloff's reports to the Emperor and the conference at his office. The gossip afloat upon the subject also appears to have been imposed upon semi-official organs in order that previous to Schouvaloff's return to London no unnecessary discussion may arise between the Russian and foreign press to disturb or injuriously affect the evident conciliatory intention apparent in the interchange between England and Russia. It is assured that Schouvaloff will leave St. Petersburg at the end of the week and return to London after making a short stay in Berlin.

The Limits of Discussion.

Though the necessity of securing the great object of war, the independence of the christians, is insisted upon there is on the other hand no disposition to ascribe, Noli Me Tangere on the map of New Bulgaria, which was only set up as a provisional draft. At the same time other considerations than those fixed up in lieu of a war indemnity are not regarded as excluded from discussion. While it is declared that there can be absolutely no serious idea of the retrocession of Kars, the same is not true of Batoum.

Indications of Peace.

The advantages to Russia of the acquisition of Batoum is said to have a reverse side, in as much as millions must be expended in construction of convenient lines of communication ar d proper fortifications before the possession of the place can be rendered of great importance. In the peaceful current of two general indications favorable significance is attached to the fact that the sight of sale in the streets has been withdrawn from the Gatz, which had lately adopted a warlike tone, while the Bourse Gazette and New Times, Aristocratic, recently took an attitude favorable to peace, had that privilege restored. Prince Gortschakoff is slightly better from the last attack of gout. The Czar will not in anyhow visit the Paris Exposition, but some of the Grand Dukes will if circumstances permit.

The London Times on Russian Credit.

LONDON, May 16. The Russian preparations to attack British Commerce attract great attention. The Times leader on the general situation refers thereto and says the United States may be depended on to do all in their power to observe the treaty of Washington, but even if the Russians succeed in equipping their little fleet it will hardly do much mischief, and will be more likely to fall victims to our cruisers than to inflict danger on our merchantmen. We might have some trouble at first, but a short time will suffice to clear the seas and make the passage of vessels from one port to another as safe as now.

The Ismaid Fleet.

LONDON, May 16. The Standard says the Porte will allow no further addition to the British fleet at Ismaid. An exchange of ships will be permitted however.

GREAT BRITAIN.
A Queenly Review.

LONDON, May 16. The Queen will shortly visit Woolwich and inspect the troops. This will be the first time her Majesty has done so in 22 years.

CANADA.
The Hanlon-Plaisted Race.

TORONTO, May 16. The Referee in the Hanlon-Plaisted race says no official time was taken and all bets on time are declared off.

DR. YELLOWSTONE.

Nature has produced natural Poets, Statesmen and Physicians. Yellowstone is certainly one of the latter. His knowledge has not been obtained at any medical university; but by close and careful study of the human system. He has such confidence in his ability to tell people at their diseases, that he examines free of charge all that visit his parlors at the Franklin House. He treats the poor as well as the rich.

WILBOR'S COD LIVER OIL AND LIME. Persons who have been taking Cod Liver Oil will be pleased to learn that Dr. Wilbor has succeeded, from directions of several professional gentlemen, in combining the pure oil and lime in such a manner that it is pleasant to the taste, and its effects in lung complaints are truly wonderful. Very many persons whose cases were pronounced hopeless and who had taken the clear oil for a long time without marked effect, have been entirely cured by using this preparation. See sure and get the genuine. Manufactured only by A. E. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists. may17 eod

Everybody sings the praises of Adamson's Botanic Balsam because it is an article of merit, of more value than gold; it relieves distress, restores health, and prolongs life. What greater office of kindness and mercy could it perform? Price only 35 cents.

DEATH OF REV. GILES BAILEY. The Press says: "A despatch received in Portland, Wednesday, announced the death of Rev. Giles Bailey in Reading, Penn. He had been troubled with kidney complaint for some time and on Sunday his son, Giles C. Bailey of the Sunday Times, was summoned to Pennsylvania. The word came too late, however, for before he arrived on Tuesday his father had passed away. The deceased was about 61 years of age and was well known as a Universalist clergyman in this State. He was pastor of the church at Gardiner for several years, and was a well known contributor to the Gospel Banner. The news of his death will be received with sincere regret by a very large circle of friends in Maine.

The schooner Malabar of Belfast, lumber loaded, from Bangor for Boston, ran ashore in the river on Saturday and sustained slight damages. She was in a tow of three vessels, and when near Sterns' mills, the hawser of the tug parted and the tow went ashore. The Malabar happened to be the inside vessels, and was the only one damaged. She put into Belfast harbor, repaired and proceeded.

PASSING COUNTERFEIT COIN. The Belfast Journal says "Adelbert Chandler, of Unity, indicated for passing counterfeit coin, was tried for the second time, at Portland last week, and convicted. The jury appears to have been in great doubt about the case, and after four hours deliberation sent word to the court that they could not agree. Judge Fox called them in, gave further instructions, and sent them out again. They then found a verdict of guilty. Fifteen counterfeit half dollars were traced to the accused; but the jury for a long time doubted whether it had been proven that Chandler knew that he was passing bad money. John Varney, Esq., of Bangor, defended the prisoner. Chandler received a sentence of two year imprisonment at hard labor. It is reported that he has made a confession that implicates a half dozen accomplices in and about Unity."

FIRE AT BELMAR. The Journal says: "At 10 o'clock Sunday night the large steam mill in the McGilvery ship yard was discovered on fire and was totally destroyed. By the exertions of the fire department the blacksmith shop belonging to the yard, and the buildings in Cotrell's yard adjoining were saved. The building was dry and burned rapidly, giving out such intense heat that the firemen were obliged to erect temporary shelter, to screen the pipemen. The building has not been used since the cessation of work in the yard, some years ago; but all the machinery remained, and consisted of an engine, boiler, planers, saws, etc. The property was owned by Capt. Henry McGilvery, subject to the mortgage claim of James P. White. The machinery, tools, stock, etc., belonged to Capt. McGilvery, whose loss is about $6000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

FROG OPERA.

Last evening a large audience again assembled at Norombega Hall on the occasion of the second presentation of the "Frog Opera," and all were unanimous in their praise of the entertainment. The performers appeared even at better advantage than on the former occasion and the recitations, choruses, and solos were rendered in the most effective manner. The audience was very enthusiastic throughout and nearly all of the solos received a warm encore at their hands, and the singers were the recipients of several magnificent bouquets. At the close of the first act the orchestra played the "Russian National Hymn" in their most artistic style. The three Russian officers occupied seats in the right balcony and at the close of the selection one of them rose and acknowledged the compliment with a bow to the musicians. This evening the opera will be repeated and the price of admission placed at twenty-five cents to any part of the hall. On Saturday afternoon there will be a matinee and all of the little folks will want to see the pollywogs, cats and cow. This will be the last opportunity for seeing this Opera and as the managers have been at a great expense in presenting it, we hope there will be a large attendance on both occasions.

LAST NIGHT'S FIRE.

At about eleven o'clock last night some one discovered a fire in Thurston & Co.'s lumber shed on Broad street, and in a few minutes a general alarm was sounded. When first discovered there was only a small blaze in one corner at the rear of the building, but the building being old and dry and containing dry lumber and a small amount of hay, it burned like a tinder-box and was soon completely enveloped in flames. Fortunately there was no wind at the time, or we should have had a serious conflagration.

The department worked well and kept the flames from spreading to any extent. A building owned by W. B. Hayford and occupied by W. H. Bradford as a coal shed, and located next to the burning building, with very little space between, was somewhat damaged, but the loss is probably covered by insurance. Mr. Bradford was well insured, and his loss will be comparatively small.

The shed where the fire originated contained some long and short lumber owned by Thurston & Co.; some lime owned by Prescott & Allen; about seventy-five barrels of guano owned by Robert Perkins, and valued at about $100; and about twelve bundles of hay owned by Thomas Moor; and some canvass coverings owned by the schooner Ringleader. The building was entirely consumed, and some lumber in a yard near by more or less burned. It is thought by many that the fire was caused by water coming in contact with the lime. In the afternoon one of the men employed about the shed heard the floor give away beneath the lime, but neglected to speak about it, and as there was a very high tide last night the water came up over the wharf. Messrs. Thurston & Co.'s loss was estimated at about $3 000, which was covered by insurance.

DECISION IN LAW.

The following decision in law has been received by James H. Burgess, Esq., Clerk of the Eastern Law District:

PENOBSCOT COUNTY CASE.

State vs. George Hines. "Exceptions overruled."

Receipt:—A sentence is no part of a conviction. Docket entries, when the record has not been extended, showing that, in a former trial of the defendant for a violation of the same provision of the Statute, a verdict of guilty has been rendered, exceptions filed and subsequently overruled and certified by the Law Court to the Clerk of the County, no other proceedings pending for the reversal of the verdict are sufficient proof of a prior conviction, though no sentence has been passed."

Police Court.

Andrew Sprague was arraigned in the police court yesterday for an assault on one Jesse Randall, and fined $10 and costs from which he appealed.

THE BEST
THE PERF BEST MEDICINE
—FOR—
Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

NEWTON, N. H., March 27, 1877

DEAR SIR:—Going back I take the pen to praise that king of medicines, Vegetine. When I began to take Vegetine two years ago with such manifest effect, and would soon subside, leaving me as bad as before. Thinking that some of those who read the testimonial which I wrote at that time might think the same, I write once more to satisfy them on that point. Since I began to take Vegetine, almost two years ago, I have gained steadily until the present time, at which I am enjoying my former health, and consider myself cured by Vegetine. Two years ago I was as low as man could be and live. I was confined to the bed for eight months, and given up to die by eight doctors, some of the most skilled in this state. They said I had severe diseases, including consumption, heart disease, and several others, equally fatal, and must die. But Vegetine, taken as a last resort, brought me through, and to that I owe my life. Since my health began to improve I have made a study of diseases, and find the cause of all my symptoms to have been Dyspepsia or Indigestion, and I also find that five cases of disease out of every six, are effects of the same cause. When the food is not properly digested in the stomach, it becomes a poisonous, putrid mass, which is absorbed into the blood, and by that is conveyed to all parts of the system, causing symptoms of disease in any or all of the organs of the body, and if this cause is not removed, these symptoms become in time organic diseases. I have given Vegetine to thousands besides my own case, and also to that of many of my acquaintance, and find it to be the very best medicine extant for Dyspepsia or indigestion, one of the symptoms of which is usual y the belief that the stomach is the seat of organic disease. I am well known in the towns of Deerfield, Newton, and Newmarket, in this State (N. H.), and can furnish an unknown corroboration of all of these statements. I will gladly answer any letters of inquiry in regard to my case, or the use of Vegetine.

Yours truly, A. J. BURBECK.

If Vegetine is taken regularly, according to directions, a certain and speedy cure of Dyspepsia will follow in all cases.

FOR

PHIL. DELPHIA, PA.

MR H. R. STEVENS:—

Dear Sir,—For the last fifteen years, during the months of March and April, I have been afflicted with what the Doctors called Asthma. It was very distressing, rendering me miserable, so that I dreaded its coming. I was recommended to use Vegetine, and took two bottles before I expected the result, and was entirely relieved. I feel grateful at heart for it. MRS. E. BALLINGER, 1103 Greek St., Phila.

Vegetine has restored thousands to health who had been long and painfully sufferers.

FOR
Pimples and Eruptions of the Skin.

H. R. STEVENS:—

My nephew has used your valuable medicine, Vegetine, for Tetter and Eruptions of the Skin, and has found great relief by the use of it. I can recommend it for such complaints.

PIMPLES
AND
Humors on the Face.

In this condition of the skin, the Vegetine is the great remedy, as it acts directly upon the blood, cleansing and purifying the blood, thereby causing humors to disappear. By internal treatment all impurities are thrown out. Vegetine gives a good circulation to the blood, relieving the infirm of congested organism, restoring to health, giving a good, clear complexion.

THE GOOD-FOR-NOTHING.

"Yes, I think I may say without boasting that this is the model school of the State, and Clarence Terry is its model scholar."

Mr. Pigeon, as he spoke, glanced at a slight, tall boy at the head of the class.

"Always first. Recites page after page without the break of syllable. Obedient, gentlemanly. In short, sir, if you discover a fault in that boy, you must have keener eyes than mine."

It was Mr. Pigeon's last day in the academy. He had been appointed to a professorship in a college, and the new teacher, Mr. Nagle had arrived to take his place. Mr. Pigeon, in fact was inaugurating him in his office.

"Here is the roll of names," he said. "I have added a remark to each which may give you a hint of the character of the boys. You will find it useful.

"'John Steele'—which is John Steele?" he asked.

"The loutish, red-haired lad at the bench. You'll observe the vacancy in his face."

As the boys changed class, Mr. Pigeon whispered, "I am almost forced to believe that that boy's mind is impenetrable—so far as knowledge goes."

Mr. Nagle paid more attention to John Steele than to any other boy that afternoon. It was undeniably a bad case. He was in the first page of the Latin grammar, while the other boys of his age were reading Virgil.

John stumbled over the first declension, breaking down invariably in the vocative. He bounded Europe by Rasna, and bounded Canada in a lump bound to South America.

Mr. Pigeon had a taste for poetry; he read with fine effect and was anxious that his boys should acquire the same taste. He was in the habit of reading some brief poems to them at the close of the morning's exercises. To-day he chose Longfellow's "Psalm of Life." The boys were encouraged to give their opinions on it.

"How does this poem affect you, Clarence?" asked Mr. Pigeon.

"They are most noble verses, sir," said the lad, fluently. "We might take some of them as a motto for our lives!"

"Very true. Good critic lad. And what did you think of them, John?"

"Didn't think anything."

"You must have some glimmer of an idea about them."

John's freckled face grew red.

"What was it? Out with it."

"Any man's a fool to be spendin' his time making footmarks on the sand," burst out John. "Why didn't he build somethin' —somethin' that wouldn't wash away?"

Mr. Nagle smiled, and looked at the boy, puzzled. He managed to talk to most of the boys, separately during recess, and among the rest to John.

"I am sorry to see you so low in your class, John."

"I'm always there," promptly. "Mostly foot."

"We must try and bring you up," cheerfully.

"You can't do it, sir,"—looking him straight in the eye, and speaking with a ready decision that startled the teacher. "I study more than any boy here. But I can't learn. I'm of no account. Mr. Pigeon says so."

Mr. Nagle was very patient with John. But after a few weeks he, too, began to despair. The boy seemed to have absolutely no memory for words, and very little for ideas. If a rule in arithmetic or a fact in history was hammered into his head today, by morrow it was gone to the bare as far as this poor brain was concerned, it certainly seemed as if nature preferred a vacuum. One day John's mother called on Mr. Nagle. She was a little, anxious woman, dressed in deep mourning.

"Can you do nothing with the boy?" she said, with tears coming to her eyes. "He's all I have. His father is dead. I hoped to give him a classical course, and to see him in some profession."

"I will do all I can," promised Mr. Nagle. But his heart sank within him.

Leaving Mrs. Steele, he went down into the village street. A crowd had collected about a French which had been flung for some purpose. The doctor's horse had fallen into it, and was struggling desperately to get out, the shelving yellow clay giving him an uncertain foothold.

Some of the men had struck him cruelly, and some were trying to urge him by dragging at the reins. All the others were looking on solemnly, with their hands in their pockets. Just then Mr. Nagle heard a clear authoritative voice:

"Help me bring these planks and put them in the trench."

Surely that was John's voice. To his surprise, the men listened to him.

"What's yer idea, Johnny?"

"The horse can help himself better than all of you can drag him, only give him a solid footing."

In five minutes the poor beast had struggled out with the help of two or three planks.

He stopped as he was led off. Nobody noticed this but John.

"Stop a moment," he cried, and lifting the horse's foot, he picked out a stone from it with a little tool which he took from his pocket; for John's pocket was filled with little tools and queer, tiny mechanical contrivances.

"Who made them, John?" said his teacher.

"I did, sir,"—looking stupid again.

The next day, about dusk, Mr. Nagle was in the ferry-boat which crossed the river at that point. Several pupils were on board, coming back from a match of base ball; among them Clarence and John.

When half way across the river, there was a loud explosion, and Mr. Nagle found himself clinging to the deck rail, his legs in the water. The boiler had burst with such force that the boat was shattered, a portion of the deck had parted from the hulk as the latter sank to the bottom of the river. There was a frantic struggle for life. Then the portion of the wreck he was on floated down stream. About a dozen of the passengers clung to it. The night fell fast. The shore was but a fast receding dark line, with red twinkling lights.

Upon the shattered deck cabin hung a single life preserver. John saw it, climbed like a cat to where it was, and brought it down.

"Give me that!" shrieked Clarence "Oh give it to me! I can't swim!"

"It is for this woman."

There was but one woman among them, and she was old and lame.

"Give it to me, I say! Help! help! We are drowning!"

He seized the life-preserver. John quietly took it from him, and buttoned it about the old woman's waist.

Then he began to drag out one or two benches and boxes that were in the cabin.

Mr. Nagle noticed how cool and alert the boy was in spite of its deadly paleness and trembling.

"We had better fit ourselves to these," he said. "This deck is so shattered it will go to pieces before they see us from the shore."

Mr. Nagle, without a word, followed his master. John was not a Latinist and no poet, but had one quality which made him a leader just then.

A few minutes later the roof broke up, and Mr. Nagle found himself in the rushing current, was picked up by one of the boats which were out in search of the victims.

The banks were lined with pale, terrified faces. As he was lifted on shore, he saw a boy dragged out of the water, and a poor little woman in black fly to him with a wild cry.

"It's all—all right mother," gasped John; and then he cried on her breast like the child that he was. "I thought I'd never see you again!" he sobbed.

Now there had been a stranger on board, a quiet, wizened little man with a foxy wig. This man who was among the saved took up his quarters at the village inn, and presently there arrived by express a massive fire-engine or pump, directed to him, which was placed in the hallway of the inn.

It seemed to have a curious fascination for John. He spent half his leisure time peering over it,—measuring the tubes with his inch rule.

In front of the case there was a square of plate-glass. Now it happened that one day, while John was relaxing his mind by a game of ball in the street, he threw the ball plump into this bit of glass.

The other boys ran, and John ran too, but only for a few steps. Then he went to his savings-bank, and took out the money which was meant for Christmas. He presented himself before the old man, who was looking at his shattered glass and taking snuff violently.

"I did that, sir. There is the money for it. Will it be enough?"

"Oh, you did it, eh?" scowling at him. "Well, give me the money. What are you eternally prying into my press for, anyhow?"

"It's not a press. It's a pump. I understand it all but that wheel. I can't make out what that wheel is there for," starting for it with a hands in his pockets.

The old man talked to John awhile. That evening he called on Mrs. Steele, and sent up his card. "Peter Copley, Machinist."

"I've had my eyes on your boy, ma'am," he said abruptly, "for some time. Noticed him the night of the explosion. I'd like to take him with me and teach him my trade. He has a sound, practical head that boy."

"Mrs. Steele accepted the offer, and went with her boy.

Twenty years afterwards Mr. Nagle, then a judge in the Supreme Court, tried a case in which the firm of Copley & Steele, engine builders, was plaintiff.

In the course of the suit, he became acquainted with the junior member of the firm, a man of high standing in his business and of equally high repute as a man of probity and honor.

One day there was a sudden recognition.

"John Steele, the?"—

"Good-for-nothing? Yes," said John, with a laugh; "and no better acquainted with the classics of belles-lettres than than, Judge. I had but one talent, and I came near burying it for life. Wise men I hear a boy despond because he has not a dozen talents, I say, 'Look for the one talent, boy! Look for the one!'"—Monthly Companion.

ECCENTRICITIES OF FASHION.

When flounces are set up "gusts o' wind" and fringes "flames of fire" then fashionable colors are spoken of seriously as "réveux de la reine" "poisons de saison" "nymphe emue," "sage de taureau," "eau en cavier," or rose, "excès d'emotion," one is inclined to believe that the heads of women of fashion have been turned by some strange fancies. When these colors are familiarly spoken of, without being translated into good Saxon English, the result is sometimes ludicrous; clerks and dress makers have the names at their tongues' ends without knowing their meaning or understanding their subtle suggestiveness, and there is a sort of Chinese room which one regards the whimsical, though absurd, foreign nomenclatures. The tender green of the linden blossom as expressed in "tilleul," as "till" becomes the familiar nickname to Matilda, and means nothing; this season's "biche," which paints to the eye the coloring of the deer, takes on the meaning of a vulgar word, much abused, and yet, to speaking only the female of the canine breed.

But to prove that history repeats itself even in so small a thing as the names of fashions we quote a passage from an old English magazine published in London in 1795. The September number of that year has in it a translation from the French of a letter written by a young girl to her grandmother, who seems to have reproved her for a too great fondness for the follies of the day. The young woman cleverly answers it in reproof by her dung up and pooting the fashions of her grandmother's young days. "To convince you," she says, that she is no worse than the young women of other times, "I need only to transcribe a description of the fashions as written from Paris in a letter from my great-grandmother, to which you will certainly agree, and decide, I find I should among some old papers." Here is an enumeration:

"The ladies dress their heads very high, with a toupet in front, and the hair curl in a brush. The point of the coupet, which projects on the forehead, is called the physiognomy; the curls on each side, which are very large and separate, are denominated ailerons. The bonnets are of pink, very small, and ornamented with flowers and English ribbons. Of these bonnets there are two hundred different kinds, from ten livres up to one hundred in price. The bunches of feathers are of prodigious size; when they are white, a plume of the color of the dress is worn with them, or one of jet black. The most fashionable color for the robe is called 'the queen's hair;' next to this in repute is puce or ox. Straw-colored satin is very much worn, trimmed variously with gauze. Lace or fur. They reckon above one hundred and fifty different kinds of trimming. Vases are painted, brocaded satins, each one of which has a name. The most fashionable is 'smothered sighs;' apple-green, striped with white, is also much in favor; it is called 'lively shepherdess.' The following are the names of the most celebrated styles: 'inducement,' 'grande regale,' 'pretence,' 'vapors,' 'sweet sighing,' 'sighs,' 'regrets,' 'honorable conquest of Lille.' Hoop petticoats are very small slippers are puce color or queen's hair. In this part of the dress which most particularly distinguishes the magnificence of our fashionables. They are embroidered with diamonds; and the ribbons are almost universally worn. Ladies dare not show them themselves; but let their feet are like boxes of jewelry. The slippers are long and narrow; the stripe behind is ornamented with jewels. Mantles are banished. A gastell of a neck handkerchief, finely wear's down to peep, when they feel it proper. This every woman has at her choice. A lady's dress of the shoulders they have devices of lace, gauze, or blonde, very thickly plaited; this is named, the 'Archduchess Medicis.' 'Henry IV.,' or high-coiled ruff. The ribbons made in fashion are 'attention,' 'doth despair,' 'eye dejected,' 'the sigh of Venus,' 'instant conviction.' Lately at the theatre in a robe of smothered sighs, ornamented with regrets, with a pouting in the middle of perfect candor, slippers of queen's hair embroidered with diamonds in perfidious strokes; her hair curled in super-refined sentiment, with a bonnet of perfect enthusiasm, pink, with wild feathers, ribbons of eye dejected, with a cat on her shoulders of the color of strangers, a despairing Medicis and a mind of momentary agitation."

When the mind devotes itself solely to the matter of dressing the result is about the same in all ages of the world.
